

Contents

PREFACE	ix
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xi
FOREWORD by Frank Stilwell	xiii
INTRODUCTION	xvii
Challenges: personal and political	xix
A brief snapshot of my life	xxiv
The structure of this book	xxix
Works Consulted	xxxix
CHAPTER 1	1
Justice for People with Disabilities is Structured on Empowerment	1
The consequences of the biomedical model	4
The consequences of the social model	8
Dignity of risk should be a disability right	13
Section 69 of the Victorian Equal Opportunity Act 1995	14
An inclusive society for people with disabilities	15
Insights into my life	20
Love, sex, disability and stereotypes	27

A just society for people with disabilities	31
Action in Australian disability rights	37
Works Consulted	43
CHAPTER 2	49
Neoliberalism and Its Impact on People with Disabilities	49
A critique of the economic ideology and theory behind neoliberalism	55
Neoliberalism in practice	58
Is neoliberalism an answer to the challenges of globalisation?	61
Neoliberalism and people with disabilities	64
Neoliberalism, marginalisation and social exclusion	71
The New Zealand approach	75
Works Consulted	78
CHAPTER 3	82
The Third-Way (Social Democracy): Just Neoliberalism with a Smiley Face?	82
Insights into the political economy of the third-way	83
The third-way critique of the welfare state	93

How Australia became reliant on the third-way	96
The National Disability Insurance Scheme	100
The third-way and people with disabilities	105
The third-way in practice	116
Can the third-way's form of social democracy on its own harmonise globalisation?	120
Works Consulted	124
CHAPTER 4	129
Education for People with Severe Physical Disabilities	129
Insights into the political economy of education for people with severe physical disabilities	129
The Pensioner Education Supplement	134
The digital revolution	138
Globalisation and the knowledge society	142
The dominant political approach	146
Disability advocacy: why does it elude those most in need?	148
Living with a severe and progressive disability	153
Works Consulted	162

CHAPTER 5	165
Employment and its Economic and Social Empowerment of People with Disabilities	165
Insights into the political economy of employment for people with disabilities	165
Identifying some of the obstacles to employment for people with disabilities	172
Empathy, not sympathy, helps inclusiveness	176
Legal actions against discrimination for people with disabilities	181
Direct discrimination	183
Indirect discrimination	184
Affirmative action for people with disabilities	187
A critical analysis of employment for people with a disability	192
The neoliberal beliefs behind work and culture	198
Works Consulted	206
CHAPTER 6	211
Service Provision for People with Severe Physical Disabilities	211
The Victorian State Disability Plan: reality or rhetoric?	213

The State Disability Plan 2002–2012	213
The disability plan 2013–2016	214
Disability Services—efficient, standardised, impersonal	215
The downside of individualised social services	220
Being a person with severe physical disabilities in Victoria, Australia	222
The importance of support workers for people with severe physical disabilities	228
Related pitfalls in an American context— some lessons to consider	233
Synergy and inclusiveness for people with disabilities	235
Labour shortage in the disability sector	241
A reform Disability Services needs to push	247
The risks to direct employment	253
Help available to direct employers	255
Case studies	257
Peter Sember, a direct employer	257
Amanda Gunawardena, an academic support worker	259
Ajay Joseph and Cunxia Li, support workers	260

Works Consulted	263
CHAPTER 7	271
Pushing for justice: the author interviewed by Bruce Wearne	271
Foreword (by Bruce Wearne)	274
Social space with economic room to move	274
Introduction	274
Where is the dignity in ‘my future, my choice?’	293
Part 1	293
Part 2	296
Part 3	300
Works Consulted	304
CONCLUSION	305